

31-26-6. When rights and duties take effect; termination of rights and duties.

The rights and duties established pursuant to the provisions of the Victims of Crime Act take effect when an individual is formally charged by a district attorney for allegedly committing a criminal offense against a victim. Those rights and duties remain in effect until final disposition of the court proceedings attendant to the charged criminal offense.

History: Laws 1994, ch. 144, § 6.